No change or modification of this contract will be binding unless it is written and signed by a duly authorized representative of each of the parties. 13. Remote servants. Certain equipment models are supported and served using data that is automatically collected by Xerox or transmitted from/to Xerox by the customer network connected ("Remote Data") by means of electron transmission to a safe external location ("remote access to data"). Remote access to data also allows Xerox to transmit to the customer software versions and to diagnose and remotely modify equipment to repair and correct malfunctions. Remote data examples include product registration, meter reading, no supply, configuration and equipment configuration, software and problem/failure code data. Remote data can be used by Xerox for revenues, generation of reports, replacement of supplies, support services, recommendation of products and and for product improvement/development purposes. Remote data is transmitted to and from Customer in a secure manner specified by the Access to remote data will not allow Xerox to read, view or download the contents of any customer document or other information residing in or passing through the customer's equipment or information management systems. The customer grants Xerox the right, free of charge, to access remote data for the purposes described above. Upon request from Xerox, the customer will provide contact information for equipment such as the name and address of the customer's contact and IP and physical/location addresses of the equipment. The Customer will allow access to remote data through a method prescribed by Xerox, and the Customer will provide reasonable assistance to allow Xerox to provide access to remote data. Unless Xerox deems the equipment incapable of accessing remote data, the Customer shall ensure that access to remote data is maintained at all times that maintenance or support services are being provided. 14. Driver data collection. For driver software installed on a computer device, you agree that the software may collect technical data and related information relating to the type of computing device and operating system; location (country and city) of the computing device; and the volume, frequency and way of using the software and its features. Xerox may use this information and statistical data, trends and usage information derived from this information and the use of the software for the purposes of developing, supplying, operating, maintaining and/or improving its products and services or to provide products or services to you. The Software does not collect any information that personally identifies users of the Software although we may download the content of any documents processed by the Software. 15. Diagnostic software. Software used to evaluate or maintain Xerox equipment ("diagnostic software") may be incorporated, or can be loaded on Xerox equipment. Diagnostic software and the whole entry or access to it constitute valuable trade secrets of Xerox. Title for diagnosis THIRDPARTYLICENSEREADME.txt file. e. Commercial Features.
